

You Deserve Professional Senior Advice

“A Certified Senior Advisor has specialized knowledge about aging and other important health, financial and social issues that affect the majority of seniors.”

-Society of Certified Senior Advisors®

Hannah D. Ross is the owner of Elderlinx® and she is a Certified Senior Advisor. Hannah takes her designation very seriously and has taken a pledge to adhere to the Standards and Ethics of the Code of Professional Responsibility. Her education demonstrates successful completion of the challenging designation exam in five specialized and key areas:

1. Social Aspects of Aging
2. Physical and mental health aspects of aging
3. Financial and legal aspects of aging
4. Government assistance for seniors
5. Ethical communication with seniors

Families with concerns about aging can call for a home assessment of senior needs, including in-home care, long-term care, senior housing choices, monitoring medication and personal care, and end-of-life resources available to seniors. A Certified Senior Advisor ® offers a professional evaluation of needs. Our relationship with you will begin with a simple non-medical assessment to determine health concerns, living situations and other factors. Ms. Ross can help your family create a customized care plan to address issues discovered in the assessment.
